

Lilly the Black Bear is back!

WildEarth

Hope so they could monitor her movements. Hope thrived. Eventually Hope and Lily crossed paths and reunited on their own. They travelled and foraged together through the late summer and fall, and they denned together in late October.

American black bears normally give birth every 2 years, but Lily was seen with males during last spring's mating season and is likely pregnant. If she gives birth in mid-late January, we will have the rare opportunity of observing a mixed age litter – new cubs and a yearling from last year's litter. How will Hope react to new cubs?

Once again a camera has been placed in her den and we started WildEarth started broadcasting LIVE on December 30th. <http://www.member4.mystagingwebsite.com/lily-black-bear-den> Bill Powers and his Pix Controller team provided the equipment and have put a camera outside of the den this time as well that can pan, tilt and zoom. This will be excellent to see what's going on outside and also when Lily starts to go out and about.
